

Nagoya Protocol CheckList

Do I need to comply with Nagoya Protocol requirements?

YES	Statement	Notes
<input type="checkbox"/>	The materials you are using in your research are any of the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Genetic material of plants, animals, microbes or other non-human origin; - Materials (dead or alive) containing DNA and its derivatives (i.e. proteins, enzymes, metabolites); - Human pathogens (not human DNA). 	For more detailed assessment of your materials as genetic see the text of Guiding document.
<input type="checkbox"/>	You conduct research and development on the genetic and/or biochemical composition of genetic resources, including through the application of biotechnology.
<input type="checkbox"/>	You use genetic materials from countries outside of Denmark.
<input type="checkbox"/>	The providing country of genetic resources is signatory to Nagoya Protocol.*	Check this website to learn if it is.

		* If the providing country is not signatory to Nagoya Protocol it might still have national legislation which requires to obtain permission to access and use genetic resources and TK.
<input type="checkbox"/>	You started using genetic resources after October 12, 2014.

If you checked ALL the boxes above - you need to comply with the Nagoya Protocol requirements.

Contact the Head of your department and your SDU legal advisor for further assistance.

Read more detailed information on Nagoya Protocol here.

Who to contact at SDU for legal advice:

- SDU RIO
- Legal consultant at the Faculty of Science: olen@sdu.dk